Churches To Be Filled For Easter Services

Circleville and Pickaway county residents will join in the observance of Easter Sunday by jamming churches in the area. Observance of the most joyous holiday on the Christian calendar begins in some churches at 5 a. m. Many of the city and county churches are planning sunrise services Easter morning. The Easter theme will continue through Sunday school and morning and evening worship services.

Those who have purchased new clothes for the Easter parade were carefully watching weather predictions. Latest word from the weatherman said Circleville may expect "cloudy, windy and colder" conditions to prevail during the day.

ONE OF the largest crowds in the history of the traditional Pickaway County - Circleville Ministerial Association Good Friday afternoon union services gathered at the First Evangelical United Brethren Church, for a most inspirational worship in commemoration of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ some 1950 years ago on Calvary Hill.

The chancel of the sanctuary was attractively but simply decorated with a white illuminated cross against a green background, with fern and other green plants surrounding the cross.

While the worshippers gathered, Miss Lucille Kirkwood, church organist, played "Lament", a Negro Spiritual; "Ave Maria" by Schubert, "Faith" by Hornberger, and "Andate Cantabile" (Excerpt Fifth Symphony) by Tchaikovsky as prelude numbers.

Ministers participating in the service were the Rev. Carl L. Wilson, First EUB pastor and president of the ministerial association, the Rev. James A. Herbst, pastor of Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church; the Rev. Clarence Swearingen, (Continued on Page Two)

CAPITAL IS SET FOR ELABORATE EASTER PARADE

WASHINGTON, April 5—The nation's capital today looked forward to its second postwar Easter Sunday—marked by such signs of a return to normalcy as plenty of new Spring raincoat and a good supply of victuals for family dinners.

President Truman is expected to lead America's churchgoers in attendance at service commemorating the ageless and inspiring miracle of the risen Christ.

The White House said the chief executive and his family probably will attend an early morning service and will spend the remainder of the day—if the weather is auspicious—cruising on the Potomac river aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg.

The traditional Easter parade along fashionable Connecticut avenue and other famous arteries in the capital is expected to return to prewar standards for feminine frills.

Washington travel records, both incoming and outgoing, were endangered by the demand for reservations on planes, trains and buses.

A poignant Easter sunrise service is to be held at Walter Reed Memorial hospital, attended by hundreds of wounded and other disabled veterans of World War II.

Easter customarily marks the opening of the Spring tourist season in Washington and hotel managers reported capacity bookings.

CHINESE ATTACK ON AMMUNITION DUMP REPULSED

16 Americans Wounded By 'Dissident Forces' Near Tientsin

PEIPING, April 5—Reports reaching Peiping from Tangku today said five United States Marines were killed and 16 wounded in a battle against an unknown number of "dissident forces" which attacked an American ammunition dump shortly after one a. m.

A terse Marine announcement said the attackers were "repulsed and pursued northward by Marine forces four hours later."

In Nanking, meanwhile, a spokesman for the Chinese central government said the attackers were "presumed to be Chinese Communists."

Tangku is 27 miles north of Tientsin.

IN PEIPING, authoritative sources said that heavy casualties were inflicted upon the attackers and it was reported they were driven back 18 miles north of Tangku.

(At the United States embassy in Nanking, a spokesman said the embassy was awaiting further details of the incident before taking action.

(The spokesman said the embassy was not yet certain that Communists were responsible.)

Although Marine headquarters in Peiping remained officially silent regarding the incident, observers estimated that some 1,500 Communists participated in the attack which appeared to have been well planned and executed.

The ammunition dump is situated five miles from Tangku and was completely surrounded when the attack was launched.

GROUPS of attackers in varying strength reportedly infiltrated past Marine guards and succeeded in getting away with some ammunition.

The attackers mined a single road leading from Tangku to the dump and the first Marine armored vehicle rushing to the aid of the embattled guards was disabled by a land mine, holding up arrival of reinforcements.

The number of Marines stationed at Tangku was estimated at 1,000.

More probes of Lilienthal policies slated

WASHINGTON, April 5—David E. Lilienthal faced a new threat today of having to undergo further investigations on Capitol Hill after he is confirmed as atomic commission chairman.

Rep. Hoffman (R) Mich., said he wants his house executive expenditures committee to take a look at Lilienthal's past and future policies.

U.S. Reported Ready To Carry 'Stop Communism' Campaign Into Korea

WASHINGTON, April 5—The United States today was reported planning to carry on its campaign to halt the spread of Soviet political aggression in the Far East even while the fight to stop Communist infiltration in Greece and Turkey is going on.

A hint of this plan was contained in an announcement that General Douglas MacArthur has been instructed to begin immediately the distribution of certain Japanese assets as reparations.

The United States acted alone on this matter only after it became clear that Russia appeared in no way willing to take similar action through the 11-power Far Eastern commission.

THE COMMISSION, created in December, 1945, at the Moscow conference of foreign ministers, has authority to decide on important matters of policy governing the occupation of Japan.

While several countries which suffered as a result of Japanese aggression will benefit by an early distribution of Japanese industrial equipment, the move was regarded as particularly aimed at aiding Chinese economy.

This has been a matter of deep concern to the United States. The official attitude, as expressed by Secretary of State George C. Marshall when he was peace-envoy to China, is that the failure of China's economy is (Continued on Page Two)

Former Air Ace Says Unless Communism Is Stopped War Can Be Expected

BOCA RATON, Fla., April 5—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, air hero of both world wars, is of the opinion today that unless the arrogance and increased power of Russian-dominated Communism is stemmed, the world is drifting into world war three.

Rickenbacker, who is a native of Columbus, O., was a speaker at the annual dinner of the Florida Bankers association in Boca Raton.

The eastern air lines president also termed the proposed U. S. "stop Communism" loan to Greece and Turkey "probably the greatest gamble this nation has ever taken." He added:

"But they are gamblers which must be taken to halt the Russian ideology. It is my opinion that these loans could cause passive or bloody revolutions. The people of Russia are pressing to crush their government's iron curtain to find out what is going on in the world."

The air ace said the loans may hold off the spread of Communism for several years to give us more time to build opposition. He added:

"The analogies between Hitler and Stalin are the same."

EXPLODING TEAR GAS MAY BLIND CLEVELAND BABY

CLEVELAND, April 5—Thirteen-month-old Edith McNamee, Cleveland, was threatened today with the loss of her eyesight as the result of a tear gas cartridge exploding in her face.

Police said that the baby's older brother, Walter, 6, found the cartridge while playing outside the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William McNamee.

Walter, according to officers, accidentally discharged the cartridge while it was in a direct line with his sister's face, which was sprayed with the caustic gas.

NEW TRIAL FOR JULIAN ASKED

Three Reasons For Rehearing Of Case Cited In Motion Filed

Motion for a new trial for Harvey B. Julian, 26, convicted of second degree murder in the slaying of his ex-wife, Pearl Eileen, 20, was filed Saturday in the office of Pickaway County Clerk of Courts Arthur L. Wilder.

In the motion, which was filed by Defense Attorney Emmitt L. Crist, are listed three reasons for asking for the new trial. They are:

1—Verdict was against the weight of the evidence.

2—Errors in the admission of testimony objected to by the defendant.

3—Verdict was contrary to law and not sustained by the law.

Judge William D. Radcliff said that a date for hearing of the motion had not been set.

Mrs. Julian was shot to death the afternoon of Jan. 21 on an isolated township road three miles east of Circleville. Several hours afterward Julian surrendered to Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Julian was indicted for first degree murder. By order of Judge Radcliff he was committed to the Columbus State hospital for mental observation and examination. Late in February Julian was returned to the county jail and hospital officials reported to the court that while Julian was sane he had the mentality of a 9-year-old boy and that he was "on the borderline of feeble-mindedness."

Following a two day trial in common pleas court three judges who heard the case, adjudged Julian, on Tuesday, guilty of second degree murder. The jurors are Judge Radcliff, Common Pleas Judge Howard Goldsberry of Ross county, and Common Pleas Judge George W. McDowell of Highland county.

ALASKA NEARER STATEHOOD NOW; HEARINGS SET

WASHINGTON, April 5—Alaska is knocking at the doors of congress for admission into the union.

Rep. Welch (R) Calif., chairman of the house public lands committee, revealed today that Alaska will be permitted, for the first time since it became a part of the United States in 1867, to present its claims for statehood.

Welch said public hearings will be open April 16 on two resolutions proposing statehood, one by E. L. Bartlett, Alaskan delegate, and another by Rep. Angell (R) Ore.

Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska will be a major witness, along with Secretary of the Interior Krug. Other witnesses include Alaskan attorney general Ralph J. Rivers and a group of people who are flying from Alaska for the hearings.

Because of the strategic importance of Alaska to the nation's defense, Bartlett declared the war department would be a potent factor in determining the committee's action.

MANY OHIOANS FACE LOSS OF PHONE SERVICE

Independent Companies Not Affected By Strike Set For Monday

By International News Service

Approximately one-half million Ohioans, who are served by manually-operated telephones, would be without local service—except for emergency purposes—should the threatened nationwide strike of phone workers take place as scheduled Monday at 6 a. m.

The balance of the state's seven million residents, who have dial phones in their homes or offices or who are served by independent companies outside the Ohio Bell system, would be able to make local calls as usual.

However, all those served by independent companies as well as Ohio Bell would be affected by the complete disruption of long distance service.

The only independent phone company included in Monday's strike call is the Cincinnati and Suburban, whose employees are affiliated with the National Federation of Telephone Workers.

U. S. WILL ASK GERMAN RETURN

Russians Oppose Sending Evicted Persons Back To Polish Zones

MOSCOW, April 5—The United States delegation at the Moscow conference was reported today to be prepared to recommend the return of evicted Germans to pre-war German territory now under the control of Poland.

It was learned on high authority that the startling proposal was on Secretary Marshall's desk in the United States embassy for his final decision.

Marshall was believed to be studying the advantages of presenting this proposal to the foreign ministers in connection with his reported plan for the internationalization of Silesia under United Nations control.

The Silesian plan was expected to be submitted when the council reaches discussion of Germany's frontiers.

Both of these proposals were almost certain to bring angry reaction from the Soviets, who maintained this territory was ceded to Poland as compensation for the eastern areas they lost to Russia.

The United States, however, maintains that Germany's eastern territories were merely placed under Polish administration pending a final settlement of the defeated Reich's borders.

Krug Order On Mines Is Under Fire

PITTSBURGH, April 5—Interior Secretary J. A. Krug's order closing 518 of the union's bituminous coal mines today drew fire from state officials, mine operators and industrialists.

Charges and counter charges were hurled at Secretary Krug and United Mine Workers president John L. Lewis. Krug was accused of allowing himself to be "harassed to a point of fear in closing the pits."

Mine operators, meanwhile, rushed certification of safety of their operations to the coal mine administration in Washington following a joint union-management agreement to the safety conditions of the pits.

Steel manufacturers and fabricators said they believed the Krug order could be used by UMW officials as a measure to shut down the mines for an indefinite period.

TRUMAN PLANS SERIOUS TALK

Jefferson Day Speech To Be Sober Message On World Situation

WASHINGTON, April 5—President Truman tonight will deliver to the Democratic party a sober message on a world of stern realities.

If any of the thousands of Democratic stalwarts who attend the $100 a plate annual Jefferson Day Democratic dinner rally look for bright presidential gags or White House merriment, they are going to be disappointed.

Otherwise, they will hear from the lips of the man who today stands as the unspoken candidate for reelection in 1948 an outline of the basic platform on which the Democratic party will stand before the American people a year and a half hence.

The chief executive will talk to Democratic party leaders and adherents all over the nation tonight as they gather in banquet rooms for the annual dinner which is one of the chief money-raising means of keeping the political party going.

In Washington, the President will make his address in person before some 2,100 party supporters crowding every available inch of floor space in the Mayflower hotel.

Mr. Truman will begin his talk shortly after 10:30 p. m. EST. It will be broadcast throughout the nation to other Jefferson day Democratic gatherings, as well as to the nation itself, via radio networks.

REYNOLDS TRIP IS DELAYED BY BAD WEATHER

NEWARK, N. J., April 5—Heavy rain and a low ceiling delayed today the start of Milton Reynolds' round-the-world flight in the "Reynolds Bombshell."

The plane originally had been scheduled to take off from LaGuardia Field, N. Y., at 12:01 a. m. (EST) today, but city officials ruled it could not get away from that airport because the heavy gas load constituted a hazard to populated areas near the New York field.

Plans were then made to shift the starting point to Newark airport, situated in a less crowded locality.

The "Reynolds Bombshell" owned and navigated by the Chicago pen manufacturer, is fog-bound at Roosevelt Field, in Garden City, Long Island. Test flights have been made from Roosevelt field.

LAST MINUTE DRIVE TO AVERT STRIKE IS MADE

Continuous Weekend Meetings Planned Until Agreement Is Obtained

WASHINGTON, April 5—Federal conciliators called telephone union and management officials to the bargaining table today for an arduous weekend drive for a wage agreement to avert Monday's threatened phone strike.

Two separate meetings convened at 10:30 a. m. (EST) in the labor department. They involved the A. T. and T. and its long lines union and the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, and the National Federation of Telephone Workers affiliate representing the firm's employees.

Conciliator William Margolis said the peace-making efforts would be uninterrupted. He commented:

"The only thing that could stop continuous sessions now would be a settlement."

INFORMED officials admitted that the outlook was grave. Only 48 hours remains in which to compromise scores of differences between the parties.

The government held its seizure weapon in reserve.

High officials indicated that seizure of the telephone industry, if it happens at all, will not come until the final hours before the 6 a. m. Monday deadline for a walkout of 287,000 phone employees throughout the nation.

Telephone union leaders challenged the government's authority to seize the industry, and did not indicate whether the workers would remain on the job for Uncle Sam.

SECRETARY of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, assistant secretary John W. Gibson, U. S. conciliation director Edgar L. Warren and a staff of conciliators planned virtually continuous sessions today, tonight, Sunday and Monday night on the dispute.

Labor department officials kept in mind the fact that last year's threatened communications tieup was averted in an all-night bargaining meeting which produced a wage agreement a few minutes before the strike deadline.

"They were encouraged slightly by an exchange of 'offers and counter offers' on some issues in the parley between A. T. and T. and the National Federation of Telephone Workers affiliate representing its 20,000 long lines workers."

However, G. S. Dring, assistant vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, reported after last night's peace talks with union representatives that "no progress was made toward settlement."

OHIO FARMERS RECEIVE LOWER PRICE FOR MILK

COLUMBUS, O., April 5—Ohio Farmers received 33 cents a hundredweight less for whole milk sold at fluid markets in February than in the previous month as a price decline continued.

The monthly report of the U. S. department of agriculture showed today that the average price paid by producers during the month was $4.40 a hundredweight, compared with $4.73 in January and $3.40 a year ago. The price paid by manufacturing plants declined 19 cents to $3.61 during the month.

The 21 fluid markets in the state purchased an estimated 136 million pounds in February. This compared with 141 million the month before and 109 million in February, 1946. Each producer delivered a daily average of 180 pounds of milk, an increase of 10 pounds over January.

Creamery butter production in Ohio fell off 25 per cent during February to 2,850,000 pounds. Cold storage holdings in the state on March 1 were 925 thousand pounds on March 1, a decrease of 51 per cent.

Charges and counter charges were hurled at Secretary Krug and United Mine Workers president John L. Lewis. Krug was accused of allowing himself to be "harassed to a point of fear in closing the pits."

Mine operators, meanwhile, rushed certification of safety of their operations to the coal mine administration in Washington following a joint union-management agreement to the safety conditions of the pits.

Steel manufacturers and fabricators said they believed the Krug order could be used by UMW officials as a measure to shut down the mines for an indefinite period.

TRUMAN PLANS SERIOUS TALK

Jefferson Day Speech To Be Sober Message On World Situation

WASHINGTON, April 5—President Truman tonight will deliver to the Democratic party a sober message on a world of stern realities.

If any of the thousands of Democratic stalwarts who attend the $100 a plate annual Jefferson Day Democratic dinner rally look for bright presidential gags or White House merriment, they are going to be disappointed.

Otherwise, they will hear from the lips of the man who today stands as the unspoken candidate for reelection in 1948 an outline of the basic platform on which the Democratic party will stand before the American people a year and a half hence.

The chief executive will talk to Democratic party leaders and adherents all over the nation tonight as they gather in banquet rooms for the annual dinner which is one of the chief money-raising means of keeping the political party going.

In Washington, the President will make his address in person before some 2,100 party supporters crowding every available inch of floor space in the Mayflower hotel.

Mr. Truman will begin his talk shortly after 10:30 p. m. EST. It will be broadcast throughout the nation to other Jefferson day Democratic gatherings, as well as to the nation itself, via radio networks.

REYNOLDS TRIP IS DELAYED BY BAD WEATHER

NEWARK, N. J., April 5—Heavy rain and a low ceiling delayed today the start of Milton Reynolds' round-the-world flight in the "Reynolds Bombshell".

The plane originally had been scheduled to take off from LaGuardia Field, N. Y., at 12:01 a. m. (EST) today, but city officials ruled it could not get away from that airport because the heavy gas load constituted a hazard to populated areas near the New York field.

Plans were then made to shift the starting point to Newark airport, situated in a less crowded locality.

The "Reynolds Bombshell" owned and navigated by the Chicago pen manufacturer, is fog-bound at Roosevelt Field, in Garden City, Long Island. Test flights have been made from Roosevelt field.

LAST MINUTE DRIVE TO AVERT STRIKE IS MADE

Continuous Weekend Meetings Planned Until Agreement Is Obtained

WASHINGTON, April 5 — Federal conciliators called telephone union and management officials to the bargaining table today for an arduous weekend drive for a wage agreement to avert Monday's threatened phone strike.

Two separate meetings convened at 10:30 a. m. (EST) in the labor department. They involved the A. T. and T. and its long lines union and the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, and the National Federation of Telephone Workers affiliate representing the firm's employees.

Conciliator William Margolis said the peace-making efforts would be uninterrupted. He commented:

"The only thing that could stop continuous sessions now would be a settlement."

INFORMED officials admitted that the outlook was grave. Only 48 hours remains in which to compromise scores of differences between the parties.

The government held its seizure weapon in reserve.

High officials indicated that seizure of the telephone industry, if it happens at all, will not come until the final hours before the 6 a. m. Monday deadline for a walkout of 287,000 phone employees throughout the nation.

Telephone union leaders challenged the government's authority to seize the industry, and did not indicate whether the workers would remain on the job for Uncle Sam.

SECRETARY of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, assistant secretary John W. Gibson, U. S. conciliation director Edgar L. Warren and a staff of conciliators planned virtually continuous sessions today, tonight, Sunday and Monday night on the dispute.

Labor department officials kept in mind the fact that last year's threatened communications tieup was averted in an all-night bargaining meeting which produced a wage agreement a few minutes before the strike deadline.

"They were encouraged slightly by an exchange of 'offers and counter offers' on some issues in the parley between A. T. and T. and the National Federation of Telephone Workers affiliate representing its 20,000 long lines workers."

However, G. S. Dring, assistant vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, reported after last night's peace talks with union representatives that "no progress was made toward settlement."

OHIO FARMERS RECEIVE LOWER PRICE FOR MILK

COLUMBUS, O., April 5—Ohio Farmers received 33 cents a hundredweight less for whole milk sold at fluid markets in February than in the previous month as a price decline continued.

The monthly report of the U. S. department of agriculture showed today that the average price paid by producers during the month was $4.40 a hundredweight, compared with $4.73 in January and $3.40 a year ago. The price paid by manufacturing plants declined 19 cents to $3.61 during the month.

The 21 fluid markets in the state purchased an estimated 136 million pounds in February. This compared with 141 million the month before and 109 million in February, 1946. Each producer delivered a daily average of 180 pounds of milk, an increase of 10 pounds over January.

Creamery butter production in Ohio fell off 25 per cent during February to 2,550,000 pounds. Cold storage holdings in the state on March 1 were 925 thousand pounds on March 1, a decrease of $1 per cent.

In Cleveland that every effort would be made to put through emergency calls, which would not be restricted to police, doctors and other essential operations.

However, the administration is not sufficiently sure that the nationalist government of China has weeded itself of extreme reactionary elements to take direct steps, through a United States loan, to restore the nation's economy.

The reparations arrangement whereby goods from Japan will go to China was regarded as a stop gap measure.

Moreover, it was said the arrangement offsets to some degree the damage inflicted on Chinese economy by wholesale Soviet removals of heavy industrial equipment from Manchuria.

This has been a sore spot in U. S. Soviet relations since the United States has regarded the Japanese equipment in Manchuria as material for reparations. Russia has contended it was war boot.

WASHINGTON, April 5 — The senate foreign relations committee declared today in a formal report that this government "invites the surveillance of the United Nations" over the Greco-Turkish aid program.

The lengthy report on President Truman's 400-million dollar assistance bill, filed in the senate, told congress and the nation that:

1. U. S. military aid to Greece and Turkey is intended only to "help these governments help themselves and not to assume military responsibilities for them."

2. The independence of both countries are "threatened" if American aid is not given promptly.

3. The "ultimate objective" of external (Soviet) pressure on Turkey "might be to deprive Turkey of her independence."

4. In waiving exercise of the UN veto against curtailment of American aid to Greece and Turkey, the United States will be "guided by the collective will" of the security council.

THE REV. Donald E. The Rev. Mr. Mitchell reminded the large congregation that the observance of Good Friday was of no value unless Jesus became a living personality in the life of each person and that His Divine presence must be recognized as the "alpha and omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the ending." Life must be motivated by this faith of an everlasting Father, God; and a Saviour, Jesus Christ. The truth that Jesus came into the world for the three hour dramatic scene on Calvary was most emphatically stressed by the Rev. Mr. Mitchell in the closing of the sermon.

The hymn of faith, "Sweet the Moments, Rich in Blessings," was the closing congregational song after which the Rev. L. C. Sherburne, pastor of St. Philip's Episcopal church, directed a moment of personal silent commitment and followed with the benediction.

COMMUNICATIONS

If telephone wires, constructed by man, can carry a human voice over an ocean or a continent, should any man doubt that God can hear a prayer.

The invention of the telephone opened to man a vast new world of communication with his fellow men. It created vast new fortunes by the opportunities it tapped.

What the telephone opened to man in social and commercial possibilities, is insignificant in comparison with the incalculable sources of power offered him through prayer.

Prayer, from the heart and soul of someone in need of spiritual aid to an omnipresent

God, spans a universe, unaided by telephone wires, unassisted by man-made devices. Quicker than it takes to establish a telephone connection; no longer than it takes for man to fall to his knees, contact with his one sure source of power to dispel his worries and offer solution to his problems is established.

All of us need to know how to pray. A background of church and Sunday School attendance offers a fitting start in the right direction. From a weekly communion with God, daily contact with Him through prayer and righteous living can become a habit. One of the results of prayer is a peace within the individual that brings strength to bear the most rugged challenges of life, and a sense of well being which brings a realization of the true purpose of life and the proper relationships between individuals.

Excerpt from Teachings of the BAHAI FAITH

"The religion of God is the One Religion, and all the prophets have taught it, but it is a living and a growing thing, not lifeless and unchanging. In the teaching of Moses we see the Bud; in that of Christ the Flower; in that of Baha'u'llah the Fruit. The flower does not destroy the bud, nor does the fruit destroy the flower. It destroys not, but fulfills. The bud-scales must fall in order that the flower may bloom, and the petals must fall that the fruit may grow and ripen.

"Were the bud-scales and the petals wrong or useless, then, that they had to be discarded Nay, both in their time were right and necessary; without them there could have been no fruit.

"So it is with the various prophetic teachings; their externals change from age to age, but each revelation is the fulfillment of its predecessors; they are not separate nor incongruous, but different stages in the life history of the One Religion, which has in turn been revealed as seed, as bud and as flower, and now enters on the stage of fruition."

Robert Phillips, Youth Fellowship president, and Marilyn Schumm, will conduct the service. The Rev. Mr. Swearingen will speak briefly following the service theme. Robert Elsea will be in charge of ushers.

The public is invited to attend the service. At the conclusion of the early service, Youth Fellowship and guests will be served breakfast in the church basement. Under the direction of Mrs. G. D. Phillips, mothers of the young people will prepare the breakfast.

Excerpt from Teachings of the BAHAI FAITH

"The religion of God is the One Religion, and all the prophets have taught it, but it is a living and a growing thing, not lifeless and unchanging. In the teaching of Moses we see the Bud; in that of Christ the Flower; in that of Baha'u'llah the Fruit. The flower does not destroy the bud, nor does the fruit destroy the flower. It destroys not, but fulfills. The bud-scales must fall in order that the flower may bloom, and the petals must fall that the fruit may grow and ripen.

"Were the bud-scales and the petals wrong or useless, then, that they had to be discarded Nay, both in their time were right and necessary; without them there could have been no fruit.

"So it is with the various prophetic teachings; their externals change from age to age, but each revelation is the fulfillment of its predecessors; they are not separate nor incongruous, but different stages in the life history of the One Religion, which has in turn been revealed as seed, as bud and as flower, and now enters on the stage of fruition."

OIL THE NEW FUEL

A TECHNOLOGICAL revolution is pushing coal into the background. Oil is coming into use as a substitute fuel. An example of this trend is the statement by the president of the American Locomotive company, Robert B. McColl, that 95 per cent of orders for new locomotives are for Diesel-electrics. Twelve years ago only 20 per cent of orders were for this type, the rest for the coal-burning engine.

One Diesel is said to equal three steam-driven ones in strength. This greater efficiency and ease of operation help explain the decline in the coal-powered makes. But it is admitted, also, that the numerous crises in the coal industry due to strikes have helped to push oil to the front not only for industrial use but also as fuel for homes, offices and public buildings.

John L. Lewis and his paralyzing coal miners' stoppage cannot be charged with the entire responsibility for the new popularity of oil fuel. Yet that strike hurried the general acceptance of oil. Coal is still a basic tool in the nation's and the world's economy. But it is being supplanted more rapidly than most people realize.

WHOM DID YOU VOTE FOR?

HOW MANY officials for whom you voted do you know? Arthur T. Vanderbilt, former president of the American Bar Association, asked this question at a political rally where he was assigned to hold the audience until the star speaker could get there. He asked all who could name the President to raise their hands. Naturally the showing was unanimous. Then the vice-president, and fewer hands appeared. The governor was generally known; but when it came to secretary of state, state treasurer, and other minor officials, the showing was bad. And for the local officers the ignorance displayed was terrible. Yet this was an audience full of party workers who might be expected to have correct information.

Probably any intelligent group would come out as badly. One cure would be to make some of these minor offices appointive. Then the ballot would not be cluttered up with meaningless names.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

"IN THE PAST decade of war," writes Clifton Daniel in the New York Times, "no army has been able to destroy any guerrilla movement completely, especially without the active aid of the population." The British found this out 25 years ago in Ireland, where even the most violent activities of the Black and Tan special police failed to destroy the Irish Republican army. Now they are finding it out in Palestine.

Even the Nazis, using all the might and cruelty at their command, could not exterminate the underground movements of Europe. Today the Russians may hold sway in Eastern Europe, but if a local population wants to be free, not all the Soviet armies can hold them down.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 5 — Moscow has turned out to be Versailles all over again. The French want more coal than Germany can produce lying prone economically. The Russians have taken over the former position of the British empire and want similar reparations beyond Germany's defeated capacity. And they both want to keep Germany inert economically so she cannot produce enough for herself.

The game against us at Moscow is about the same as that of Clemenceau and Lloyd George, with Molotov in the role of Lloyd George and Bidault as Clemenceau, but just a bit more obvious. The United States is supposed to support Germany with food, occupation, relief, perhaps even money to get her industry started. Thus we are expected actually to pay the reparations for defeated Germany. We put in, (present cost of occupation is supposed to be about $200,000,000 a year without other considerations) while they take out. Last time we had a Dawes loan eventually, after Germany could not pay, and the amount of the loan just about balanced what the other allies, excepting the United States collected in reparations. This time the Russians will not even account for the seizures they have made of everything they could lay their hands on in their zone (They call this war loot, not reparations,) but want something more from ours, indeed want the portion of Germany not theirs, to pay them permanent annual reparations.

If you wish to go all through that again, the Russian position might be accepted. What aided us in making fools of ourselves last time was an illusion that somehow our money and help would bring peace. That illusion is not visible this time in the reparations situation.

These half-stated considerations are what lie behind General Marshall's rejection of the Soviet ultimatum on reparations. He said frankly no agreement at all was better than one like that. Marshall is not kidding. He is not playing diplomatic politics, rejecting something for effect and inwardly intending to compromise later. He means what he says.

Unquestionable semi-official sources say Marshall has been prepared to get out of Moscow and return to this country by April 15.

They expect some developments tending to which way next week. The other unexpected development which might prevent fulfillment of this expectation, they say, is that the Russians would suddenly agree to some concessions which would let the conference continue in some other city, possibly in London or Paris, thus preventing the conference from openly arriving at the stalemate toward which it is headed. The Soviets might do this just to avoid the public opprobrium which would follow an apparent breakup.

Either way it goes we actually would return to the status quo. Our occupation would continue. While this would continue to be costly, it would not cost as much as promising to furnish reparations to both Russia and France which cannot be produced, and permanent maintenance of Germany as a slum (Marshall's word,) the cost of support being ours. Again we are being blocked in any sound peace attainment by Russia's total lack of comprehension of the word efficiency, her backward attitude which keeps her from understanding industrial production, or the simplest arithmetic of the situation.

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

Treating a Case of Sprue

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SPRUE is a disease which has been known for centuries but it is only in the last few years that its true nature has been understood.

According to Drs. Samuel J. Shane and Vern F. Deyke of Montreal studies made in 1935 showed for the first time that sprue is in the same general class of diseases as is pernicious anemia. That is, it is caused by lack of a certain substance the body needs in order to function properly. It was also found that, as in pernicious anemia, liver extract contains the needed material.

The Missing Substance

In sprue the missing substance is one which gives the body its ability to use fat. When it is not present fat cannot be absorbed, but is excreted in the stools. Other effects of sprue include a loss in weight, anemia, or lessening of the coloring matter in the blood, and diarrhea. The acid in the stomach may also be less than normal. Usually X-ray examination will show certain changes in the lining membrane of the small intestine.

The diet used for this condition is one which is rich in protein and carbohydrates, without any fat. At the beginning of treatment, it is sometimes necessary to give what are known as protein hydrolysates by injection. These are water solutions of the amino acids or building blocks of which proteins are made. Sugar solutions such as glucose may also be given by injection into a vein if necessary.

As Treatment Continues

As treatment continues, the bowel may begin to regain its ability to take up small quantities of fat. At this time fats in limited amounts may be added to the diet. Since studies have shown that liver extract is of the greatest importance in supplying the material that is deficient in the body, it is administered in adequate amounts, just as in the treatment of pernicious anemia.

Since fats are not taken up from the bowel in cases of sprue, it is also likely that the vitamins which are soluble in fats will also be lacking because they too are not taken up by the body. These include vitamins A, D and K. Hence these vitamins must be injected into a muscle, at least until the bowel regains its ability to take up the fats which contain them. When the patient's condition improves to this extent, the vitamins may be administered by mouth.

Sprue is not a difficult condition to diagnose and with the treatment outlined it usually responds promptly.

Looking Back In Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Twenty-two applicants for dynamite were made with A. L. Wilder, county explosives registrar, during the month of March.

Circleville is one of 9 cities in Ohio between 5,000 and 10,000 population to receive the National Safety Council award for having no traffic fatalities during 1941.

Miss June West, Columbus, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry West, Williamsport.

TEN YEARS AGO

Mrs. A. H. Rogers, North Court street, left for California where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Floyd Gaiser of Glendale.

Burglary of the Circleville high school building was frustrated Saturday night by Police Chief William McCrady and officer Carl Radcliff.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Austin Dowden, Wayne township, spent the weekend with Mrs. Dowden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Alexander, Spring Valley.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

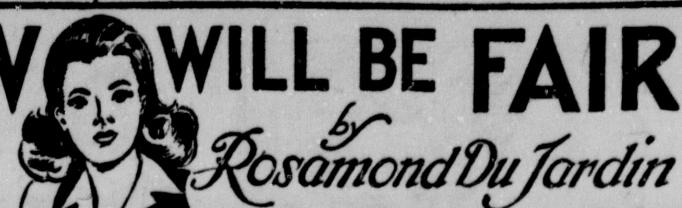

Southern Ohio Hatchery has made a shipment of baby chicks to Gladstone, Alabama. The firm also made a shipment to Boulder, Colorado, last week.

"Flattering millinery, characteristic of the season—suggests a hat of bright blue braid piped with satin; has a bee-hive crown and a narrow satin covered brim. It is trimmed with cherries primly set about the crown in clusters and bunched at the right side."

Gentle Spring has arrived — on the West Lawn of court house is a pink and white magnolia in full bloom. If it could walk, it would gaily perambulate down the avenues of the city and show off its new head gear, just like a flapper with her new Easter hat. Probably she would wear short skirts with champagne hosiery to show her symmetrical limbs; but only trees have limbs.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

VAL TURNED over on her back and opened her eyes and stared up at the ceiling. She seemed to see Rick Colby's face there, grave and loving. It had been Rick's child she wanted, for whom her empty arms would always ache. Now Rick was dead and she had never known him as a husband, she would never so know him. She would never bear Rick's child—but she would never bear Wade's child, either!

She would get up at once, Val decided, and go and tell Wade so. She flung back the covers and sat up, thrusting her long lovely legs over the side of the bed and into the satin slippers that waited there. The white chiffon robe that matched her lace-trimmed gown lay across a chair nearby and Val stood up and slid her bare arms into it, knotted the satin belt about her waist. She crossed the deep soft rug to the adjoining bath of chromium and gleaming peach-colored tile. A glimpse of her face in the mirror caught her attention as she passed and automatically she lifted a hand to push the tumbled, ash-blond hair back from her forehead.

But the gesture was uncalled for. Her husband's bed was empty. His handsome, masculine grin was empty, too. Wade had got up and gone to work without disturbing her. Perhaps, in a saner morning mood, he had realized that the talk he had proposed would not be a good idea. Perhaps he had already known the answer she would give him and had preferred not to hear it put into words.

Val leaned for a moment against the doorframe, a chill little smile curving her mouth . . .

It was an unpleasant and exasperating coincidence that her day should be singularly empty. Just when she didn't want a lot of time on her hands . . . An appointment at a beauty salon took care of what was left of the morning. She had lunch with a friend accidentally encountered there and that helped use up another hour or so. But the friend had an engagement at three. Of course, Val could always go shopping. But there was nothing she especially wanted or needed. And she wasn't in a shopping mood. What she really wanted was someone she could talk to. And so she thought of Susan Pyle.

Going up in the familiar elevator the thought of Sherry brushed against the edges of Val's consciousness. She hadn't seen her sister in weeks, she realized, nor her mother, either. But Leda wouldn't be home at this hour; probably Sherry wouldn't either. Besides, Val didn't feel in the mood for her sister's candor, her level-headedness that could, at times, make a person feel like a silly flibbertigibbet. No, Susan was her best bet.

Susan came to the door in response to Val's ring and that alone should have been sufficient warning that Susan already had plans for the afternoon. She never left her maid off any day but Thursday unless she had some reason for not wanting her around. Susan's smooth black coronet of braids, her warm olive complexion and flashing eyes were set off by the latest thing in lounging apparel, something moss-green and wickedly enticing.

She exclaimed, "Darling—what a marvelous surprise!" and drew Val in and pressed her cheek warmly against her own. Susan's perfume was as wickedly enticing as her gown, or even more so.

Val said ruefully, "I'm afraid you're expecting someone else."

Susan nodded. "Isn't it foul? Why didn't you give me a ring and I could have saved you the trouble of dropping in—today of all days." She smiled, pulling Val down onto a divan and offering her a cigarette. "But I can give you half an hour, pet. I'm free as a bird till three-thirty—then I'm embroiled with the most fascinating man. Maybe I can only give you twenty-five minutes—he might be a little early and I wouldn't want things awkward."

"I'll leave at twenty after," Val said a shade acidly. "Then you'll be quite safe. He wouldn't be earlier than that, would he?"

"No-o," Susan held her lighter for Val's cigarette and her own, "he wouldn't be any earlier than that today. But after today—"

Her shrug and smile were meaningful.

"Of course, you know you are impossible," Susan's complete frankness concerning her love affairs always amused her friends. Val leaned back and smiled at her through the smoke of her cigarette.

"One of those incorrigible people," Susan smiled back. "But, pet, I have such fun! Do you blame me?"

"It's strictly your business, the way I figure it," Val replied coldly. "You're so right," Susan agreed. She asked then, "But how are you, darling? And how's Wade? We missed you at Lucia's party the other night."

"It was Wade's idea not going."

"That again?" Susan asked, with an expressive lift of black eyebrow. Of course, Val had already confided to her some of the trouble she'd been having with

Wade. "Is the poor old dear still determined to crawl into a hole and pull the hole in after him?"

Val nodded. "That describes it perfectly."

"You know," Susan said, her dark glance thoughtful, "I saw signs and portents of this yen of Wade's to settle down and live like a responsible citizen long ago. It's been creeping up on him for ages."

"Why didn't you warn me?"

"But, pet, it should have been obvious to anyone. Anyone who knew him well, that is," Susan amended. "And of course I do know Wade well—we're such old friends. There have been little indications—oh, for the past couple of years—that he was slowing down a bit."

"I didn't notice," Val said, "until along about the time we got back from Florida. And it's been getting worse. We have the most ghastly battles."

"Oh, well," Susan shrugged. "That's just a part of marriage. Sort of adds spice, don't you think? I mean, it would be dreadfully dull if people were always agreeable."

"Well, at least we're not dull," Susan exhaled smoke in two straight columns. "You know what, pet? I shouldn't be surprised if Wade suddenly developed a paternal urge—it quite often follows."

"It broke off at something in Val's face and her black eyes widened and a little smile curved her rather thin-lipped scarlet mouth. "Darling! Don't tell me you're—"

"No," Val said a shade viciously, "I'm not! And I don't mean to be, either!"

"But, pet," Susan drawled, "you needn't argue with me about it. I think the idea's quite mad. You and Wade"—she said with a rising infection—"a mamma and daddy? Oh, no!"

"I'm so glad you feel that way, dear. I'd hate to disappoint you," she broke off at something in Val's face and her black eyes widened and a little smile curved her rather thin-lipped scarlet mouth. "Darling! Don't tell me you're—"

Congress Resents Label
As a "Do-Nothing" Body

Russian Bulletin Lauds
Naval Heroes of Past

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Senators on both sides of the aisle are thinking they have taken an unfair "dickling around" by columnists and cartoonists who are labeling the 80th Congress a "do-nothing" body. There is a lot to be said for their side of the argument. Collectively the Congress has not produced much legislation for the law books yet—but it has done a tremendous amount of spadework, and the legislators, individually, have been extremely busy.

Committee work has been heavy. Reporters as well as senators have felt the brunt of that. Veterans on the Hill say that never before have so many committees held important hearings simultaneously.

Figuring in the prolonged hearings—on the Senate side—is the traditional Senate principle of allowing "full debate." Typical of that position was Senator Burke Hickenlooper (R) of Iowa who allowed the David E. Lillenthal hearings to lag on for more than six weeks.

Hickenlooper, who was there every day, was more weary than anyone else. He frequently expressed himself privately to reporters. He saw no reason for thinking that the continuing parade of witnesses could throw much additional light on Lillenthal's qualifications. However, he would not have cut off the testimony if foes of the former TVA chairman had more to offer.

The plight of Hickenlooper is symbolic of situations which lead to "do-nothing" labels for the 80th Congress.

THE RUSSIANS ARE SAYING LITTLE publicly these days about their historic desire to control the Dardanelles. But their yen to sit astride the storied Bosphorus and have a warm Red sea-lane to the Mediterranean world is as expansive as a vodka jug. Diplomatic observers, tongues-in-cheek, are noting the statement of the Russian embassy regarding the Turks, which came amid developments in President Truman's Greco-Turkish aid program.

The statement passed unnoticed in many places. It appeared in "USSR," the information bulletin of the embassy. The bulletin is the voice of Russia speaking in Washington. It portrays the Soviet mind.

Latest issue of the publication began by discussing the glories of Russian sea commanders from the days of Peter the Great to the last war. Great sailors, the bulletin observed, the match of any man who ever sailed the ocean.

Then, with less subtlety, came a discussion of the Russian fleet of yore and the Turks. The bulletin said: "In Cheshmen bay in 1770 the Russian men-of-war blockaded and burned the powerful Turkish fleet."

The bulletin also spoke of sea victories over the Scandinavian countries—the battle of Vyborg, against the Swedes, in 1790. Then it shifted back to the Turks.

"In the battle of Synop," it said, "in 1853, Admiral Nakhimov destroyed a Turkish squadron without losing a single vessel of his own." The article concluded by saying that the Red fleet of today "is not designed for conquest, but to serve the cause of peace."

THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT has found a new way of preserving food that combines dehydration and freezing.

Food processors are keenly interested in this new method which the department says reduces the cost of packaging, storage, transportation and refrigeration. Moreover, fruit preserved in the new way retains its original shape.

The process, known as dehydrofreezing, involves carrying the food through the first process of dehydration and then freezing it. Vitamins and flavor are virtually undamaged and the fresh quality of the food remains, according to agriculture department experts.

Bright note for the housewife—food prepared in this manner takes less space in the refrigerator.

One Diesel is said to equal three steam-driven ones in strength. This greater efficiency and ease of operation help explain the decline in the coal-powered makes. But it is admitted, also, that the numerous crises in the coal industry due to strikes have helped to push oil to the front not only for industrial use but also as fuel for homes, offices and public buildings.

John L. Lewis and his paralyzing coal miners' stoppage cannot be charged with the entire responsibility for the new popularity of oil fuel. Yet that strike hurried the general acceptance of oil. Coal is still a basic tool in the nation's and the world's economy. But it is being supplanted more rapidly than most people realize.

WHOM DID YOU VOTE FOR?

HOW MANY officials for whom you voted do you know? Arthur T. Vanderbilt, former president of the American Bar Association, asked this question at a political rally where he was assigned to hold the audience until the star speaker could get there. He asked all who could name the President to raise their hands. Naturally the showing was unanimous. Then the vice-president, and fewer hands appeared. The governor was generally known; but when it came to secretary of state, state treasurer, and other minor officials, the showing was bad. And for the local officers the ignorance displayed was terrible. Yet this was an audience full of party workers who might be expected to have correct information.

Probably any intelligent group would come out as badly. One cure would be to make some of these minor offices appointive. Then the ballot would not be cluttered up with meaningless names.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

"IN THE PAST decade of war," writes Clifton Daniel in the New York Times, "no army has been able to destroy any guerrilla movement completely, especially without the active aid of the population." The British found this out 25 years ago in Ireland, where even the most violent activities of the Black and Tan special police failed to destroy the Irish Republican army. Now they are finding it out in Palestine.

Even the Nazis, using all the might and cruelty at their command, could not exterminate the underground movements of Europe. Today the Russians may hold sway in Eastern Europe, but if a local population wants to be free, not all the Soviet armies can hold them down.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 5 — Moscow has turned out to be Versailles all over again. The French want more coal than Germany can produce lying prone economically. The Russians have taken over the former position of the British empire and want similar reparations beyond Germany's defeated capacity. And they both want to keep Germany inert economically so she cannot produce enough for herself.

The game against us at Moscow is about the same as that of Clemenceau and Lloyd George, with Molotov in the role of Lloyd George and Bidault as Clemenceau, but just a bit more obvious. The United States is supposed to support Germany with food, occupation, relief, perhaps even money to get her industry started. Thus we are expected actually to pay the reparations for defeated Germany. We put in, (present cost of occupation is supposed to be about $200,000,000 a year without other considerations) while they take out. Last time we had a Dawes loan eventually, after Germany could not pay, and the amount of the loan just about balanced what the other allies, excepting the United States collected in reparations. This time the Russians will not even account for the seizures they have made of everything they could lay their hands on in their zone (They call this war loot, not reparations,) but want something more from ours, indeed want the portion of Germany not theirs, to pay them permanent annual reparations.

If you wish to go all through that again, the Russian position might be accepted. What aided us in making fools of ourselves last time was an illusion that somehow our money and help would bring peace. That illusion is not visible this time in the reparations situation.

These half-stated considerations are what lie behind General Marshall's rejection of the Soviet ultimatum on reparations. He said frankly no agreement at all was better than one like that. Marshall is not kidding. He is not playing diplomatic politics, rejecting something for effect and inwardly intending to compromise later. He means what he says.

Unquestionable semi-official sources say Marshall has been prepared to get out of Moscow and return to this country by April 15.

They expect some developments tending that way next week. The other unexpected development which might prevent fulfillment of this expectation, they say, is that the Russians would suddenly agree to some concessions which would let the conference continue in some other city, possibly in London or Paris, thus preventing the conference from openly arriving at the stalemate toward which it is headed. The Soviets might do this just to avoid the public opprobrium which would follow an apparent breakup.

Either way it goes we actually would return to the status quo. Our occupation would continue. While this would continue to be costly, it would not cost as much as promising to furnish reparations to both Russia and France which cannot be produced, and permanent maintenance of Germany as a slum (Marshall's word,) the cost of support being ours. Again we are being blocked in any sound peace attainment by Russia's total lack of comprehension of the word efficiency, her backward attitude which keeps her from understanding industrial production, or the simplest arithmetic of the situation.

"So your mind seems to be wandering? Don't worry—it's too weak to go far!"

DIET AND HEALTH

Treating a Case of Sprue

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SPRUE is a disease which has been known for centuries but it is only in the last few years that its true nature has been understood.

According to Drs. Samuel J. Shane and Vern F. Deyke of Montreal studies made in 1935 showed for the first time that sprue is in the same general class of diseases as is pernicious anemia. That is, it is caused by lack of a certain substance the body needs in order to function properly. It was also found that, as in pernicious anemia, liver extract contains the needed material.

The Missing Substance

In sprue the missing substance is one which gives the body its ability to use fat. When it is not present fat cannot be absorbed, but is excreted in the stools. Other effects of sprue include a loss in weight, anemia, or lessening of the coloring matter in the blood, and diarrhea. The acid in the stomach may also be less than normal. Usually X-ray examination will show certain changes in the lining membrane of the small intestine.

The diet used for this condition is one which is rich in protein and carbohydrates, without any fat. At the beginning of treatment, it is sometimes necessary to give what are known as protein hydrolyzates by injection. These are water solutions of the amino acids or building blocks of which proteins are made. Sugar solutions such as glucose may also be given by injection into a vein if necessary.

As Treatment Continues

As treatment continues, the bowel may begin to regain its ability to take up small quantities of fat. At this time fat in limited amounts may be added to the diet. Since studies have shown that liver extract is of the greatest importance in supplying the material that is deficient in the body, it is administered in adequate amounts, just as in the treatment of pernicious anemia.

Since fats are not taken up from the bowel in cases of sprue, it is also likely that the vitamins which are soluble in fats will also be lacking because they too are not taken up by the body. These include vitamins A, D and K. Hence, these vitamins must be injected into a muscle, at least until the bowel regains its ability to take up the fats which contain them. When the patient's condition improves to this extent, the vitamins may be administered by mouth.

Sprue is not a difficult condition to diagnose and with the treatment outlined it usually responds promptly.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

VAL TURNED over on her back and opened her eyes and stared up at the ceiling. She seemed to see Rick Colby's face there, grave and loving. It had been Rick's child she wanted, for whom her empty arms would always ache. Now Rick was dead and she had never known him as a husband, she would never so know him. She would never bear Rick's child—but she would never bear Wade's child, either!

She would get up at once, Val decided, and go and tell Wade. She flung back the covers and sat up, thrusting her long lovely legs over the side of the bed and into the satin mules that waited there. The white chiffon robe that matched her lace-trimmed gown lay across a chair nearby and Val stood up and slid her bare arms into it, knotted the satin belt about her waist. She crossed the deep soft rug to the adjoining bath of chromium and gleaming peach-colored tile. A glimpse of her face in the mirror caught her attention as she passed and automatically she lifted a hand to push the tumbled, ash-blond hair back from her forehead.

But the gesture was uncalled for. Her husband's bed was empty. His handsome, masculine room was empty, too. Wade had got up and gone to work without disturbing her. Perhaps, in a saner morning mood, he had realized that the talk he had proposed would not be a good idea. Perhaps he had already known the answer she would give him and had preferred not to hear it put into words.

Val leaned for a moment against the doorframe, a chill little smile curving her mouth.

It was an unpleasant and exasperating coincidence that her day should be singularly empty. Just when she didn't want a lot of time on her hands... An appointment at a beauty salon took care of what was left of the morning. She had lunch with a friend accidentally encountered there and that helped use up another hour or so. But the friend had an engagement at three. Of course, Val could always go shopping. But there was nothing she especially wanted or needed. And she wasn't in a shopping mood. What she really wanted was someone she could talk to.

And so she thought of Susan Pyle. Going up in the familiar elevator, the thought of Sherry brushed against the edges of Val's consciousness. She hadn't seen her sister in weeks, she realized, nor her mother, either. But Leda wouldn't be home at this hour; probably Sherry wouldn't either. Besides, Val didn't feel in the mood for her sister's candor, her level-headedness that could, at times, make a person feel like a silly flibbertigibbet. No, Susan was her best bet.

Susan came to the door in response to Val's ring and that alone should have been sufficient warning that Susan already had plans for the afternoon. She never left her maid off any day but Thursday unless she had some reason for not wanting her around. Susan's smooth black coronet of braids, her warm olive complexion and flashing eyes were set off by the latest thing in lounging apparel, something moss-green and wickedly enticing.

She exclaimed, "Darling—what a marvelous surprise!" and drew Val in and pressed her cheek warmly against her own. Susan's perfume was as wickedly enticing as her gown, or even more so.

Val said ruefully, "I'm afraid you're expecting someone else." Susan nodded. "Isn't it foul? Why didn't you give me a ring and I could have saved you the trouble of dropping in—today of all days." She smiled, pulling Val down onto a divan and offering her a cigarette. "But I can give you half an hour, pet. I'm free as a bird till three-thirty—then I'm embroiled with the most fascinating man. Maybe I can only give you twenty-five minutes—he might be a little early and I wouldn't want things awkward."

"I'll leave at twenty after," Val said a shade acidly. "Then you'll be quite safe. He wouldn't be earlier than that, would he?"

"No," Susan held her lighter for Val's cigarette and her own, and wouldn't be any earlier than that today. But after today—? Her shrug and smile were meaningful.

"Of course, you know you are impossible," Susan's complete frankness concerning her love affairs always amused her friends. Val leaned back and smiled at her through the smoke of her cigarette.

"One of those incorrigible people," Susan smiled back. "But, pet, I have such fun! Do you blame me?"

"It's strictly your business, the way I figure it," Val replied coldly. "You're so right," Susan agreed. She asked then, "But how are you, darling? And how's Wade? We missed you at Lucia's party the other night."

"I missed the party," Val said. "It was Wade's idea not going." "That again?" Susan asked, with an expressive lift of black eyebrow. Of course, Val had already confided to her some of the trouble she'd been having with

Wade. "Is the poor old dear still determined to crawl into a hole and pull the hole in after him?"

Val nodded. "That describes it perfectly." "You know," Susan said, her dark glance thoughtful, "I saw signs and portents of this yen of Wade's to settle down and live like a responsible citizen long ago. It's been creeping up on him for ages."

"Why didn't you warn me?" "But, pet, it should have been obvious to anyone. Anyone who knew him well, that is," Susan amended. "And of course I do know Wade well—we're such old friends. There have been little indications—oh, for the past couple of years—that he was slowing down a bit."

"I didn't notice," Val said, "until along about the time we got back from Florida. And it's been getting worse. We have the most ghastly battles."

"Oh, well," Susan shrugged. "That's just a part of marriage. Sort of add-a-spice, don't you think? I mean, it would be dreadfully dull if people were always agreeable."

"Well, at least we're not dull," Susan exhaled smoke in two straight columns. "You know what, pet? I shouldn't be surprised if Wade suddenly developed a paternal urge—it quite often follows—"

"She broke off at something in Val's face and her black eyes widened and a little smile curved her rather thin-lipped scarlet mouth. "Darling! Don't tell me you're—"

"No," Val said a shade viciously. "I'm not! And I don't mean to be, either!"

"But, pet," Susan drawled, "you needn't argue with me about it. I think the idea's quite mad. You and Wade—she said with a rising inflection—"a mamma and daddy? Oh, no!"

Val said, "I'm so glad you feel that way, dear. I'd hate to disappoint you." She stubbed out her cigarette and rose. "Well, I'll be running along. Sorry I barged into something special."

"I loved having you," Susan said, getting up, too. "And next time you must stay longer—much longer. But you know how it is. Give Wade my love..."

As Susan let her out of the little foyer, Val caught a glimpse of herself in the gilt framed mirror. A tall, slim girl in a smart red frock, her very good fur coat slung carelessly on her shoulders, a tiny skullcap of matching fur set far back on her blond head. Portrait of a lady with no place to go and a lot of time to get there, she thought wryly...

STARSSAY—

For Saturday, April 5

A CONTINUED obstruction of affairs, with much arrested or blocking of plans and programs, despite patient and persistent effort, makes it a day on which it might be well to make it a weekend for seeking relaxation and diversion, with personal compensations for conflicting and tricky affairs. In any case the mentality seems unable to cope with overwhelming circumstances and would benefit by rest or spiritual solace and inspiration.

On the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of perplexities and problems, which the mind seems unable to unravel, despite a sincere and earnest marshaling of forces aimed at breaking up a state amounting to an impasse. Tenacious attempts to batter down restrictions and obstacles may but aggravate the situation or turn the ideas into disintegrating channels. Maintaining the status quo might be the safest and wisest procedure. Find personal diversion.

A child born on this day may find his affairs so complicated, limited or restricted by strange or quixotic events as to feel indifferent toward solving riddles.

For Sunday, April 6

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most felicitous one, with all indications for an exceptionally happy, joyous and exuberant state of affairs, possibly in celebration of an outstanding social, domestic or artistic event, in which the affections and finer emotions are emphasized. There is danger of going to extremes in this pleasant pursuit, with probably more outlay of funds and energies than is discreet.

In a more prosaic way success, and realistic ambitions should flourish, although there may be great temptation to excess, extravagance and overdoing with energies and resources.

A child born on this day will be richly endowed with social, artistic and romantic talents, fitting it for a happy and creative career. A trend to excess or extravagance should be given early direction.

Congress Resents Label
As a "Do-Nothing" Body

Russian Bulletin Lauds

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Senators on both sides of the aisle are thinking they have taken an unfair "licking around" by columnists and cartoonists who are labeling the 80th Congress a "do-nothing" body. There is a lot to be said for their side of the argument. Collectively the Congress has not produced much legislation for the law books yet—but it has done a tremendous amount of spade work, and the legislators, individually, have been extremely busy.

Committee work has been heavy. Reporters as well as senators have felt the brunt of that. Veterans on the Hill say that never before have so many committees held important hearings simultaneously.

Figuring in the prolonged hearings—on the Senate side—is the traditional Senate principle of allowing "full debate." Typical of that position was Senator Burke Hickenlooper (R) of Iowa who allowed the David E. Lilienthal hearings to lag on for more than six weeks.

Hickenlooper, who was there every day, was more weary than anyone else. He frequently expressed himself privately to reporters. He saw no reason for thinking that the continuing parade of witnesses could throw much additional light on Lilienthal's qualifications. However, he would not have cut off the testimony if for the former TVA chairman had more to offer.

The plight of Hickenlooper is symbolic of situations which lead to "do-nothing" labels for the 80th Congress.

THE RUSSIANS ARE SAYING LITTLE publicly these days about their historic desire to control the Dardanelles. But their yen to sit astride the storied Bosphorus and have a warm Red-sea lane to the Mediterranean world is as expansive as a vodka jug.

Diplomatic observers, tongues-in-cheek, are noting the statement of the Russian embassy regarding the Turks, which came amid developments in President Truman's Greco-Turkish aid program. The statement passed unnoticed in many places. It appeared in "USSR," the information bulletin of the embassy. The bulletin is the voice of Russia speaking in Washington. It portrays the Soviet mind.

Latest issue of the publication began by discussing the glories of Russian sea commanders from the days of Peter the Great to the last war. Great sailors, the bulletin observed, the match of any man who ever sailed the ocean.

Then, with less subtlety, came a discussion of the Russian fleet of yore and the Turks. The bulletin said: "In Cheshmen bay in 1770 the Russian men-of-war blockaded and burned the powerful Turkish fleet."

The bulletin also spoke of sea victories over the Scandinavian countries—the battle of Vyborg, against the Swedes, in 1790. Then it shifted back to the Turks.

"In the battle of Synop," it said, "in 1853, Admiral Nakhimov destroyed a Turkish squadron without losing a single vessel of his own." The article concluded by saying that the Red fleet of today "is not designed for conquest, but to serve the cause of peace."

THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT has found a new way of preserving food that combines dehydration and freezing. Food processors are keenly interested in this new method which the department says reduces the cost of packaging, storage, transportation and refrigeration. Moreover, fruit preserved in the new way retains its original shape.

The process, known as dehydrofreezing, involves carrying the food through the first process of dehydration and then freezing it. Vitamins and flavor are virtually undamaged and the fresh quality of the food remains, according to agriculture department experts.

Bright note for the housewife—food prepared in this manner takes less space in the refrigerator.

The months have been many since the end of conflict, and we have slowly assumed the calm of peace while building up the stability which will enable us to make that peace endure. As we join the joyous Church throngs this Easter, surrounded by loving family, cheering friends and friendly neighbors we can make one simple resolution in behalf of that peace. We can resolve to live the spirit of Easter throughout the year . . . and not to shed our "Sunday manners" of tolerance and sincerity when we hang away our "Sunday clothes." And as the meaning of Easter now fills our hearts, let it also guide our deeds day in, . . . day out.

Inspired by His Holy Resurrection we join the joyous Church throngs this glorious Easter. As we bend our heads in prayer . . . as we hear the voices of the choir boys lifted up in Easter hymns, the calm of peace fills our hearts. Surrounded by devoted family, loving friends and good neighbors, spiritual understanding invades our souls. Suddenly, we grasp the full meaning of Easter, tolerance and brotherhood . . . blessings that enrich the life of every man. And as this meaning slowly fills our very beings let us resolve that it shall not end with this day, but it shall be our guide in acts and deeds every day throughout the year.

ANNUAL EASTER EGG HUNT HELD AT EUB CHURCH

Rain failed to dampen the spirits of children of the primary department of First Evangelical United Brethren Church, Friday afternoon, when they gathered for their traditional Good-Friday afternoon Easter egg hunt.

Planned for out-of-doors, the hunt was taken to the church community house when it began to rain.

Group was divided into two sections for the search for some 200 colored eggs. Children under school age were in one group while those over school age were in the other group. Final tabulations showed Michael Kirkpatrick winner of the older group and Joseph Wilkinson declared the winner in the younger group. After all eggs had been accounted for, each child received an equal number.

Program was in charge of Mrs. Udel Pritchard, Mrs. Montford Kirkwood, Jr., Mrs. Carl L. Wilson and Miss Gladys Noggle. Games and contests were enjoyed by the various age groups. Awards were given to Linda Justice and Drenda Arledge.

Devotions were in charge of Mrs. Hillis Hall who led the children in group singing, the Lord's prayer and an interesting Easter story.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge to the following children: Eugene Dowden, David Thomas, Diana Conrad, Mickie Conrad, Jimmie Hinton, Junita Hinton, Gary Agin, Carl Tomlinson, Sussie Tomlinson, Earl Tomlinson, Merle Tomlinson, Kathleen Hare, Patricia Dresbach, Luanna Dres-

The months have been many since the end of conflict, and we have slowly assumed the calm of peace while building up the stability which will enable us to make that peace endure. As we join the joyous Church throngs this Easter, surrounded by loving family, cheering friends and friendly neighbors we can make one simple resolution in behalf of that peace. We can resolve to live the spirit of Easter throughout the year... and not to shed our "Sunday manners" of tolerance and sincerity when we hang away our "Sunday clothes." And as the meaning of Easter now fills our hearts, let it also guide our deeds day in... day out.

This Easter

Inspired by His Holy Resurrection we join the joyous Church throngs this glorious Easter. As we bend our heads in prayer... as we hear the voices of the choir boys lifted up in Easter hymns, the calm of peace fills our hearts. Surrounded by devoted family, loving friends and good neighbors, spiritual understanding invades our souls. Suddenly, we grasp the full meaning of Easter, tolerance and brotherhood... blessings that enrich the life of every man. And as this meaning slowly fills our very beings let us resolve that it shall not end with this day, but it shall be our guide in acts and deeds every day throughout the year.

West led his lone diamond to the K. East also scored the A, then put forth the 8 for West to ruff. The club 3 was taken by the A and the spade Q fished, then the club 9 led to the K. The club 2 was ruffed by the spade 5 and the spade A, scored, then the 8 led to the K. East returned the diamond 10 to the J. South laid down the last spade, then led the heart 8.

Here was where West pulled a colossal boner. His remaining cards were the heart A-J and he saw in dummy the heart Q and diamond J. Having in his mind now the idea that East held the heart K and a set-up diamond, he played low. The dummy's Q consequently won the trick and the club J got the last trick. That gave the declarer an extra trick.

West knew positively that East had a diamond left when he reached his last two cards. If he had been looking, he would have noticed East discard the heart 2 on the preceding spade trick, thus leaving him only one heart. Simplest reckoning should have told West it could not be the K, since East would not have blanked it in that situation. He therefore should have come in with his A on the next to last trick, thus preventing South from scoring an extra. In the long run those little extra tricks add up, often meaning the difference between being a winner and a loser.

New Vocational Building And Gym Planned Here

FACILITIES IN CITY SCHOOLS ARE INADEQUATE

Training For Jobs, Better Physical Education For Pupils Hoped For

Circleville children are entitled to adequate educational facilities, it was declared by the board of education, Saturday, in outlining the urgent need for money necessary to expand and improve the schools.

Voters of Circleville and Circleville township will decide at the May 6 election whether the school board can sell $387,000 of bonds to finance the improvements the board said are vitally needed for the proper training of the youth of the community.

Two major projects are planned in the event the bond issue is approved by the citizens. They are:

- (1) — Construction of a vocational education building with proper and complete equipment for the training of youths in industrial trades.
- (2) — New gymnasium with adequate equipment.

Lawrence J. Johnson, a member and spokesman for the school board, said that the existing vocational training facilities are "woefully inadequate". He said that youths now are being taught only woodworking, electric welding, acetylene welding, and mechanical drawing. With more facilities, he asserted, the vocational training program can be expanded to meet present needs, and many other industrial trades can be added to the program.

AUTHORITATIVE statistics, Johnson declared, show that only about 13 per cent of the high school graduates enroll at college and that it is therefore necessary that the fundamentals of various industrial trades be taught to students in high school, who will not enter institutions of higher learning.

Another sorely needed improvement to the Circleville school system, the board said, is a new gymnasium. Board members pointed out that the state department of education requires that each pupil receive a stipulated amount of physical education each week. The present gymnasium is too small. Its facilities are so inadequate that it is impossible for school authorities to comply with the state department of education regulations pertaining to physical education.

There are also no suitable place or facilities for football, it was pointed out, and the seating capacity is far too small.

DEFINITE plans for these two major improvements have not been made and of course cannot be completed, the board said, unless and until the voters cast their ballots in approval of the issuance of the proposed $387,000 of bonds to finance the needed improvements.

Sites for the proposed vocational education building and the proposed new gymnasium have not been selected, it was explained, and will not be until after approval by the citizens.

A resolution adopted by the board of education at a recent meeting was certified to the Pickaway county board of elections. The balloting on the bond issue will be at a special referendum election to be held simultaneously with the May 6 primary. Voters will mark the "yes" or "no" school bond issue ballot and, in order to pass, the issue must receive at least 65 per cent of all the votes cast on the issue.

THE BONDS would be dated June 1, 1947. The bonds would mature over a 21½ year period, starting June 1, 1948 and ending June 1, 1969.

County Auditor Fred L. Tipton has calculated that this special tax would be 2.4 mills or 24 cents per each $100 of taxable property valuation the first year. This tax rate would decrease gradually during the life of the bond issue and the average assessment for the entire period would amount to less than 2 mills, in other words less than 20 cents for each $100 of taxable property valuation.

A similar proposal to issue $387,000 of bonds for school expansion and improvements was balloted on at the May 1946 election, but the issue lost when it failed to receive the necessary 65 per cent of the votes cast.
